POETRY

BLACK SHEEP. From their folded mates they wander Their ways seem harsh and wild; They follow the beck of a baleful star Their paths are dream-beguiled.

Yet haply they sought but a wider Some loftler mountain slope, and little recked of the country strange Beyond the gates of hope.

And haply a bell with a luring call
Summoned their feet to tread
Midst the cruel rocks, where the deep pitfall
And the lurking snares are spread. Maybe, in spite of their tameless days Of outcast liberty, They're sick at heart for the homely ways Where their gathered brothers be. And oft at night, when the plains fall dark
And the hills loom large and dim,
For the shepherd's voice they mutely hark
And their hearts go out to him.

Meanwhile, "Black sheep! Black sheep!" we cry,
Safe in the inner fold;
And maybe they hear, and wonder why,
And marvel out in the cold.

—Richard Burton.

THE WIND-BARREN.

Night is on the downland, on the lonely moorland.
On the hills where the wind goes over sheep-bitten turf.
Where the hent grass heats upon the unploughed poorland.
And the pine woods roar like the surf.

Here the Roman lived on the wind-barren lonely, Dark now and haunted by the moor-land fowl; None goes there now but the peewit only, And moth-like death in the owl.

Beauty was here, on this beetle-dron-ing downland;
The thought of a Caesar in the pur-ple came
From the palace by the Tiber in the Roman lownland
To this wind-swept hill with no

Lonely Beauty came here and was here in sadness,
Brave as a thought on the frontier
of the mind,
In the camp of the wild upon the
march of madness,
The bright-eyed Queen of the Blind. Now where Beauty was are the windwithered gorses

Moaning like old men in the hillwind's blast.

The flying sky is dark with running horses

John Mansfeld, in the Yale Review.

And the night is full of the past.
